Summer Programs

**The Johns Hopkins Engineering Innovation Summer (EI) Program will be offered again in 2019, and we hope that you will share information about this exciting course with your students.

EI is the summer version of a freshman course offered to engineering students at JHU who have not decided which field of engineering will be their major. We have condensed the semester-long course into four or five weeks. During the course, students complete lab activities in computer, chemical, electrical, computer, civil, mechanical engineering, and materials science. They also prepare a presentation in response to a Request for Proposal, learn about engineering economics, build a spaghetti bridge, and have the opportunity to earn college credit.

This is a great opportunity for students to try college engineering while still in high school. They can decide if they want to pursue an engineering major and which field is of the most interest to them.

Need-based full and partial scholarships are available for commuting students. Students interested in receiving financial aid should apply early.

Below is a link to a video in which past EI students and faculty talk about the program:

<https://ei.jhu.edu/engineering-overview-video/>.

This course is rigorous, and students must have As and Bs in their high school math and science classes. They also must have taken the following subjects to be eligible to apply:

- q Algebra II
- q Physics or Chemistry
- q Trigonometry, or have learned to use the trig functions – up through the application of the laws of sines and cosines to resolve non-right angle triangles in another math course
- q Most students are rising Juniors and Seniors in high school

Location-Hood College-Frederick, MD

**Stanford University Summer Institute will once again select top high school students from around the world to participate in engaging academic programs. The programs offered are highly motivated, intellectually curious students the opportunity to investigate topics not typically taught in secondary schools. Students engage in small classes taught by instructors who are experts in their fields and passionate about teaching. In this setting, students hone their academic skills and form new friendships with intellectual peers. Students in our residential programs get a taste of college life on the beautiful Stanford campus. Past students have described their Stanford Pre-Collegiate Studies experience as life-changing.
